

SONG.

Oh! bright are the moonbeams which silent ly play
On the dark rolling wave, and the high dashing spray;
Oh, bright is the lustre the diamond doth show, Oh, bright is the dew drop, and bright is the snow;
Bright, bright are the bubbles that mantle the bowl,
And bright are the joys, old wine gives the soul;
But brighter, far brighter than either to me, A glance of affection from thine eyes would be.
Oh, sweet is the scent of the jessamine flower,
And sweet are the roses that twine round thy bow;
Oh, sweet is the honey the wild bee collects,
And in opening petals so slyly detects, Thrice sweet are the fancies and thoughts of our youth,
That season of innocence, beauty and truth,
But sweeter, far sweeter than either to me, Would a kiss from thy beautiful ruby lips be.
Oh, dear is old Cymry, the land of my birth, Above all other countries and places on earth.

"Wherever I wander, wherever I roam, Right dear is my own, my forefathers' home Oh! dear are mementos of long deceased friends,
And dear are the thoughts which their presence oft lends;
But dearer, far dearer than either would be Fond whispering of Love, coming gently from thee.

Flowing.

Does the reader wish a dissertation on plowing, giving our views on the manner it should be done, &c. Well, here it is in two lines.

"Plow deep, while sluggards sleep, And you shall have corn to sell or keep."

"Plow deep," that you may turn up the virgin subsoil and mingle it with the top soil and thus add to it the peculiar properties necessary to the growth of the plan, which has been in a great manner withdrawn by previous crops; and that the roots find a deep bed into which they may extend themselves out of the reach of August's scorching rays. Make the ground mellow twelve inches deep and it will retain double the moisture against the drought, of ground mellowed six inches. An ingenious Yankee has invented a plow that plows two furrows at once. He will do the farmers a great service if he will teach them to use it with one furrow exactly under the other.

"While sluggards sleep." Aye that's it! Be thrifless in the morning. Whoever knew a thrifty farmer that was not an early riser?
"Poor Richard" understood that as well as Solomon.

But there is one thing more about plowing, which the man who would have "corn to sell or keep" must remember; which is this; he must attend to the matter personally; he must put his hand to the plow. It will not do to delegate this work to boys, for the same writer says, in another place, with no less truth,

"He that by the plow would thrive, Himself must either hold or drive."

BAD EFFECTS OF MISCELLANEOUS READ-ING.—Of two young men of equal capacity, suppose that one occupies himself for a certain period in light reading of a miscellaneous character, and the other devotes the same time to the vigorous study of one or two works requiring close attention and continuous thought, such as Butler's Analogy, Smith's Wealth of Nations, Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding, or Mills's Logic, the amount of intellectual benefit derived by two will be greatly in favor of the latter. The former will have gained merely a crowd of heterogeneous impressions, lying in confused masses in his memory, like the threads and patches of a rag bag, while the other will have been through an athletic course of mental discipline, by which every faculty is invigorated. Beware of the man of one book, says a Latin proverb. He knows no more than that, but that he knows thoroughly. Let me commend to every young man who hears me to form the habit of reading with a definite object and with concentrated attention, and not to roam over a library as one strolls through a garden, picking up upon books because there is something taking in the titles or because the contents have an inviting look as we turn over the leaves. Be continent to be ignorant of some thing, in order that you may know other things well. It is better to know everything of some things than something of everything. Study, says Cicero, and no man ever had a better right to define study than he, for no man ever studied harder—is the intense and assiduous occupation of the mind, applied to some subject with earnest good will. One hour of such study is worth a day of listless dawdling over a shelf of books.—[Hillard's Address before the Mercantile Library.

"It is said that Jersey girls and Jersey horses are very unlike, for a wonder! The horses are shy, skittish, and hard to entice, but the girls are as tame as kittens, and as bold as lions. They flock around a salt trough, and have to be driven off with clubs.

"The oldest fire-arms are the arms of an ardent young lady. We may add, in a whisper, that they are frequently the most dangerous.

GREENLY ON BEARDS.—In an editorial on Beards in the last number of the New York Tribune, Horace Greeley concludes as follows: But we say to Young America in counting-houses and workshops, never touch your beards with a razor. Despite the dictates of fashion, and let the hair of the face grow silken and soft, only trimmed by the scissors. Your health will be improved; your teeth will be sounder; your liability to colds and bronchial and lung affections will be sensibly diminished; your convenience will be daily consulted; your manly beauty—no despicable thing, as it is the type of what ought to be the dower of every man—will be indefinitely increased, and the true and poetical contrast to feminine loveliness be once more secured, which is impossible under the starved, scraped, wiry caricatures which shave-lings now present.

GATES.—Never put up a pair of bars where you can hang a good gate. They are perplexing, and do not answer the purpose half so well as a good gate. Where one has to pass frequently into a field or enclosure the time occupied in taking them down and putting them up will often pay the expense of constructing and hanging a good permanent gate which will last for years, and may be opened and closed in a minute. Gates that hang on hinges so as to swing in and out and which fasten themselves both backward and forward by means of spring are most desirable. Their appearance too is quite in good taste, which is a matter of some importance in most situations.

Love your neighbor as yourself, said a person to an honest member of his flock;
"The Lord help him, then," replied the latter, "for I hate myself like pizen ever since I let Righteous Skinfirst cheat me out of the hob-tail merr."

MORE TERRITORIES.—In the U. S. Senate Senator Johnson, of Arkansas, reported a bill having for its object the organization into separate territories of the Choctaw, Cherokee and Creek tribe of Indians.

CALLAWAY MULES.—Messrs. Jacob and Irvin Maddox, of this county, have sold to Mr. N. L. Lindsay, of Bourbon county, Ky., one hundred mules, (one year old last summer) for the sum of $10,000. They are supposed to be the finest lot of mules ever raised in Missouri. They will average fifteen hands high, and are in fine condition for colts of their age.—[Telegraph.

JOHN ROLL'S GEOGRAPHY.—The Illustrated London News, for January 21, has the following, in an article on American An-nexion:

They (the Americans) have already purchased from the King of Mexico, a tract of country covering several millions of acres, to which they have given the name of Nebraska, and which is to be forthwith colonized by the Anglo-Saxon.
